

GOMEZ DIES IN S F

The sudden and untimely death in San Francisco last Saturday night of Faxon J. Gomez, a former Redwood City boy, was a severe shock to the young man's friends on the peninsula.

The deceased was a nephew of Mrs. Harry W. Jamieson, and Mrs. Mary E. Winter, and a cousin of Miss Inez Jamieson, the widely known musician, of this city.

The deceased was preparing Saturday evening to leave for Long Beach to visit his brother, Alexander Gomez, who had been dangerously ill. He stepped into the bathroom and there suffered a heart attack, expiring in a few minutes. He was found in the bathroom on Sunday by a maid in the hotel in which he was stopping.

Faxon Gomez was born at Pacific Grove thirty-one years ago but as an infant of ten months he was brought to Redwood City by his mother, the late Mrs. J. J. Gomez, who cared for the boy only as a father could devoting her time and energies to his welfare.

As a youngster he became attached to the Times-Gazette carrying papers and acting as a printer's "devil." In the evening he filled the position as usher at the Sequoia theatre, being the first boy at the place to fill that place.

Inducting from the high school to employment with the Western Pacific Company, identifying himself with the auditing department, where he worked his way to an important place when the late Angel summoned him.

Gomez was a hard working and able young man, a credit to the community in which his young years were spent.

He was fully appreciated and was roughly grateful for the assistance rendered him by his devoted and patient in the days of his youth in a struggle for an education on a difficult one. He never forgot kindness and love of his relative, and he went to the city to reside and missed a Sunday in company to visit his grandmother and his salary warranted it he was freely of his money desired to partly repay the sums he had upon him in his youth by his life who was not overburdened with this world's goods. He knew sacrifice that was made for him and wanted to show his appreciation by doing it.

After the death of Mrs. Kearse, his mother, his visits to Redwood City were infrequent. His mother was formerly Nora Gomez of this city. She married a son of Monterey many years ago. She came from a pioneer family of Monterey. The Gomez family at the time owned nearly half of Monterey County, Mr. and Mrs. Gomez lived away many years ago.

The young Gomez was known, at the Times-Gazette nearly twenty years as a cheerful boy, willing and ready at all times to help in all occasions in the office. Everyone loved him for his many ways and cheerfulness. To know him was to love him. It is to be regretted that so young a man should be called away.

Protests Filed To Street Plan

The proposed widening of Broadway by cutting three feet off each sidewalk between Washington street and Main street met with four protests Monday evening. The protesters were Edward Harrison, representing the First National Bank and San Mateo County Savings Bank; A. J. Fromm, H. B. Gardiner and H. W. Schaberg, who represented the San Mateo County Building and Loan Association.

It was the contention of the protesters that the removal of three feet from the sidewalks in front of their property would bring the electroliners too close to the buildings and would make the sidewalks too narrow.

The desire of the city council is to make the lines of electroliners to be installed on this section of Broadway line up with those on the other portions of the street. In order to do this they must be set back three feet. It was finally decided that the gentlemen who were objecting to the three foot cut on the sidewalks should be appointed as a committee to investigate sidewalks of the proposed width in Palo Alto and other cities, and report later if they did not think the proposed width would be sufficient.

The matter will be further discussed by the city council on Monday.

Bank Loses Suit On Halfmoon Ranch

A verdict in favor of Joseph Bettencourt of Halfmoon Bay and adverse to the Bank of Halfmoon Bay was brought in by a jury in the court of Judge George H. Buck on Tuesday and was on Wednesday upheld by the judge, who refused a motion to enter any other judgment.

Suit was begun some time ago by attorneys for Bettencourt over foreclosure proceedings by which the bank took over the 635 acre Bettencourt ranch near Halfmoon Bay. Bettencourt, it was stated, took two mortgages from the bank, totaling $10,000. When payments were not made on these mortgages the bank foreclosed. The property was sold to Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Davis of San Jose for a price stated to have been $17,500. Later the property was conveyed to Lewis Martin of San Francisco and by him to the El Granada Holding Co. for $100,000.

It is alleged that Mrs. Davis is a sister of Manuel Bettencourt, cashier of the Bank of Halfmoon Bay, who is not related to the plaintiff, Joseph Bettencourt. In the verdict in favor of the latter, both Manuel Bettencourt and the Davises are named as defendants as well as the Bank of Halfmoon Bay. The judgment of the jury was that the defendants should pay to the plaintiff $20,000 as damages.

Plan Changed For Laundry Building

Another, and perhaps the last, chapter in the long controversy concerning the erection of a steam laundry at the corner of Jefferson avenue and the railroad track, occurred before the city council Monday evening, when Thomas Nelson, the applicant, asked that his application be dropped.

In order that a laundry be erected in this location it had been necessary for the council to change the property from the business zone to the light industrial zone. This had been done in spite of the protests of the owners of the adjoining property.

On Monday night the property was again placed in the business zone. This action was prompted by the filing of a petition signed by more than four hundred citizens and protesting the action of the board. Nelson then asked that a piece of land situate in the Perry tract and between Broadway and Brewster street be rezoned to enable him to erect the laundry there. This will be done if no protests are received at a special meeting of the council to be held Monday evening for this purpose. The new location will face on Perry street near the Southern Pacific tracks.

A Letter To An Eastern Friend

Wednesday, Jan. 23, 1929.

My Dear:

You "Minnesotans" are not the only ones to see snow this week—the we "Redwoodites" have to stretch our necks a bit further. The mountains just back of us actually have snow.

To see the people literally swarming up to Kings Mountain Sunday, one would think there were several feet of snow, not about an inch. Personally I have no uncertain opinion of anyone foolish enough to make an effort to see snow. That opinion includes myself.

About noon I joined the procession to see snow. Cars were returning decorated with snow men, snowballs and boxes filled with snow. Children—four to forty-four—were at the sides of the road making snowballs to be thrown at passing cars. Snow fights ensued on all sides and a hilarious time was had by all—Ain't we got fun!

The snow clinging to the thick foliage of the trees was truly beautiful to see and the blue of the Pacific in the distance. How fortunate to be surrounded with such gorgeous scenery.

Tiring of this unusual pastime we returned to our fair Redwood for a game of golf. Diversified diversion, what? Glorious California.

Either you have had or are about to have your annual January thaw. I see it so plainly—the streets running with dirty slush, melting snow covered with coal dust, everything even to one's clothes seems shabby. Next month more snow and March another thaw—you are welcome to it. Give me clean, sunny California.

Work and its Reward

Do your work!
No matter what the task may be,
Attack it with heroic zeal.
Be not content until you see
Accomplishment, until you feel
That satisfaction gained alone
Through sense of duty nobly done;
So is your honest value shown,
So is appreciation won.

Do your work!
Not just the labor specified,
But with a willing heart do more.
Let loyal service be your guide!
The joys of life are waiting for
That man who never fails to do
His very best, and he will find
Untold reward in purpose true
And self-respect and peace of mind.

F. J. Smith Heads County Y. M. C. A.

Frederick J. Smith is to be the chairman of the San Mateo County Young Men's Christian Association for 1929.

At a dinner in honor of Chas. P. Taft held last week at the Hotel Benjamin Franklin, Frederick Smith of San Mateo was unanimously elected to succeed John Gill of Redwood City as chairman of the Y. M. C. A. Committee of Management.

Over 100 leading citizens, Y. M. C. A. Committeemen and officials attended the annual meeting of the association. Chas. P. Taft of Cincinnati gave a splendid address, setting forth the world wide scope of the Young Men's Christian Association and explaining in detail the effective program of the "Y" with boys. As one of the leading attorneys of Ohio Taft knows the value of character building work with boys and told many interesting incidents of his contacts with the boys of his own city.

Taft was introduced to the gathering by A. M. Chesley, State Boys' Work Secretary for the Y. M. C. A. Chesley was the Boys' Work Secretary at Washington, D. C. when Chas. Taft joined the Y. M. C. A. as a boy with Quentin Roosevelt.

An interesting sidelight showing Taft's wonderful regard for boys is shown in the fact that following his address last week he drove all the way to South San Francisco to personally present a medal to Stanton Burns one of the honor boys who could not attend the dinner because of illness.

Fred M. Hanson of Palo Alto, Regional Executive of the Y. M. C. A. for the Pacific Coast, presided as toastmaster. Rev. Geo. Holt, Baptist minister of Burlingame gave the invocation.

Exchange Club Views Pictures Of Great War

One of the most interesting meetings of the Redwood City Exchange Club was enjoyed by members of that organization Tuesday evening when authentic pictures of the World War were shown. The pictures were shown by Paul Wood, laquer specialist of the W. F. Fuller Paint Co. The pictures showed the armies of the allies in action in some of the most famous salients of the great war. The chairman of the meeting was Attorney A. J. Stebbins.

A unique feature of the evening was the presentation to the recently elected president, Kendall Towne of a gavel made like a small automobile. Towne is in the automobile business here. The presentation speech was made by Frank Griffin.

Next week a progress dinner is planned by the club in recognition of the remarkable development of aviation.

For the first time in seven years a Redwood City basketball team has won a contest in P. A. A. play. The Sequoia Athletic Club 14's last night trounced the Humboldt Evening School by a 33 to 29 score. This victory means that the Redwood City team has advanced to the second round of play, to commence next week.

After taking three shots at the basket, Paul Bartolomei finally scored the winning points. "Tick" Hallett, a Woodside boy, added another basket to clinch the game just as the final whistle sounded.

Safes Cracked By Burglars

Two safes in this county were broken into this week apparently by the same persons and sums totaling nearly $300 stolen. The first safe to be blown open was that of the United States Laundry of office at Beresford. This safe was rifled Sunday night and more than $75 removed. On Wednesday night the safe of the Southern Pacific station at Belmont was similarly broken into and about $100 taken.

Both jobs are believed to have been done by experienced safe crackers and the indications point to them having been done by the same persons. The evidence in both cases is being carefully analyzed by Undersheriff Farrell.

Cruelty Charged In Suit For Divorce

Charging that her husband had beaten her, and that it was necessary on one occasion for her to have him arrested for battery, Mrs. Beatrice Magner of this city this week filed suit for divorce from Michael Magner. Mrs. Magner asks custody of three minor children, a monthly allowance for their support and a share of the community property consisting of a lot on the Woodside road, a lot in San Francisco and some household effects.

Heavy Fines Levied For Double Offense

Fines totaling $800 were paid Wednesday by Mrs. Mae DeKnight on two charges, the possession of liquor and of slot machines. Mrs. DeKnight appeared before Justice of the Peace Edward I. McAuliffe, who fined her $500 for the illegal possession of liquor and $300 for the operation of the slot machines.

This was the second time that Mrs. DeKnight was arrested for these offenses. Her establishment is located on El Camino Real a short distance south of this city.

PLANS FOR CITY HALL

The city council of Redwood City on Monday evening asked Edwards & Schary, San Francisco architects, to draw up two alternate sets of plans and specifications for creating more space for city offices. One of the plans is to be for a new city hall, the other is for the enlargement of the present building.

The crowded condition of the city offices and the fact that two of the city offices, those of the attorney and engineer must at present be housed in a separate building, have for some years been a problem to the city trustees. The proposition of enlarging the city hall was once before placed before the people and at that time the necessary bonds were defeated.

It is now thought by the city council that if the facts are understood by the people of the town that the required bond issue will pass. It is planned to submit one or the other of the two propositions to the people in the near future. The estimated cost of a new city hall is $100,000. The present building can be enlarged for $50,000, it is thought.

The party progressed at a lively pace until the last of the guests left early in the wee hours of the next morning. Games, dancing and several vocal selections by Gladys Cronk, popular radio entertainer, were in order at various times during the evening.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

Receipts at the Pittsburg postoffice were $5,500 higher in 1928 than in 1927, according to the annual report of Harry A. Barnes, secretary of the Pittsburg Chamber of Commerce.

Novice duck hunters, whose only protection against wading their shells on mudflats has been their inky black plumage, are now in a quandary, for Floyd Jenkins of Chico has killed a white madden. He says he saw the bird and because of the white feathers thought it was a duck.

Maddux Airlines, Inc., which for the last several months has made its home base at Mills Field, San Francisco have moved their entire equipment to the Alameda airport, which it was announced, would be the home base of the company's trimotored Ford monoplanes in the future.

Miss Amanda M. Hicks, 87, cousin of Abraham Lincoln, died in Turlock a short time ago. For twenty-two years she was connected with Clinton College, Clinton, Ky., and for sixteen years of that time she was president. Coming to California thirty-one years ago, she had been connected with educational and welfare work of the University of California for twenty years.

Announcement that a 200-room hotel, eight stories in height will be erected in Stockton this year was made by a syndicate headed by Hubert H. Briggs, president of the Stockton Chamber of Commerce, and D. J. Richard, former secretary-manager of the same organization. The building will cost $750,000. Later, plans for a theater and facilities for a club may be included.

The camera lied in the case of Miss Inspiration, it seems. Protest that not complimentary photographs, and not the original of the nude statue gracing the State Library, have caused the recent outcry against that work was issued today by the sculptor, Edward Field Sanborn. In a formal statement which the New York artist made public through library officials at Sacramento, Sanborn declared that, with the exception of one New York critic, there was no sensation over the garb until photographs taken in Sacramento and widely disseminated reached the public.

Southern California communities each will have vested right in Colorado river water brought through a proposed aqueduct from Boulder canyon dam to the southern part of the State. That is the purport of a tentative agreement reached at a conference in Sacramento between Governor Young, John Bacon of the Colorado River Commission, H. N. Savage, hydraulic engineer of San Diego, and Senator Edwin Mueller of El Cajon. Legislation is contemplated calling for a bond issue to construct an aqueduct to bring into Southern California a portion of the Boulder canyon dam water, should such action be taken. San Diego desires to participate, Mueller said, and the conference was arranged with a view of protecting that city's right.

Life is just one thrill after another in Gerber, where the folks go in for things worth while. Just now the community is preparing to go in for farm relief. They intend to show what the well-dressed farmer should wear and to that end will stage a style show some time this month. The farmers are tired of taking their ideas in nifty overalls and hickory shirts from the movies and hereafter will get their styles from Gerber instead of from Hollywood. Costumes shown will be useful but also ornamental, with a touch of the collegiate or something. They will include suitable and eye-compelling garments for the cattle rancher, including the latest thing in sheep-staffs; the dirt farmer and the chicken rancher.

Quail in parts of Southern California are receiving their food like the Israelites of old when the manna descended upon them from heaven. The quail are given a regular ration of grain from aeroplanes swooping close to where they are grouped in green spots that resemble the extensive grass fires last fall, according to the Automobile Club of Southern California. The existing situation is believed to be the first of its kind. In the grass and brush fires which ravaged 100,000 acres last fall tens of thousands of quail escaped the fires with singed wings and legs. Not only were they physically handicapped, but found that the fire had destroyed practically all of their food. The birds grouped themselves in the little valleys where there remained sufficient moisture to resist the fire, but did not have range enough to eke out an existence without the aid of man. Daily flights of aeroplanes now carry food to the feathered refugees. Every effort is being made to keep them alive until the winter rains bring back the grasses, plant life and insects upon which they depend for existence.

More full-time students are registered at the University of California than at any other American college. That was announced by the Association of American Universities in Associated Press dispatches. Regular term students at both Berkeley and Los Angeles totaled 17,337. Second on the list is Columbia University in New York City with 13,691. The next four in order are the University of Illinois, University of Minnesota, University of Michigan, and New York University.

Long-standing agitation to have control of San Francisco Harbor taken from the State and given to the municipality struck another snag when the Chamber of Commerce wired Gov. Young a reaffirmation of the opposition it has "maintained over a period of years" and shipping interests prepared a united assault on the forces supporting transfer of jurisdiction. The transfer has been taken to the Legislature on a number of occasions but has never attained action. It is pending again at the present session in the form of a new bill.

The engagement of Miss Helen Willis, star of women tennis players, to Fred S. Moody, Jr., young San Francisco broker, was announced in Berkeley recently by Dr. and Mrs. Clarence A. Willis, her parents.

Eight months will be needed to build the first unit of the Chico State Teachers College. This is the estimate of E. H. Larsen, construction foreman, who is in charge of the building operations. He stated his crew would commence operations at once.

Liquor is so plentiful in San Francisco that E. R. Bohner, prohibition administrator, is unable to find space to store that confiscated by his agents. A section of the Appraisers' building which was assigned to Bohner's use for storage purposes, has been filled by the raids of the past week and other space must be found.

Abolition of the motor vehicle speed limit on California highways has been proposed by Assemblyman Morgan Keaton of Long Beach. Keaton's bill would repeal the present provisions for a speed limit of 40 miles an hour on the open road, thus requiring traffic officers, so he said, to concentrate on the actual crime of reckless driving.

The beacon on Benton Airport, Redding's aviation field, was recently turned on for the first time. The beacon flashes its great beam of light at intervals of ten seconds and can be seen for miles around. The beacon is one of a series erected at intervals on the route between Oakland and Portland. The next beacon on the north is to be at Delta, forty miles away.

State Superintendent of Banks Will C. Wood has approved the agreement for purchase and sale of the First National Trust and Savings Bank of Whittier by the Bank of America of California. The trapping season in the northern part of the state is much better than usual, even the women going into the business. Mrs. Lorraine Spurbuck of French Gulch has out a line of fifty traps. Up at Delta, Mrs. R. E. Pyle has fifty traps out along Dog Creek and up the mountain side. She visits every trap every day and in making the rounds walks five miles a day.

With the arrest of five men and the seizure of two damaged airplanes recently United States officials declared they had broken up the most amazing Chinese smuggling organization which had ever operated in the West. At least 250 alien Chinese had been brought across the Mexican border by airplane within the last four months, government investigators declared. Oakland now takes its place among the shipping centers of the world, as it becomes an official port of entry. The distinction was given the city through an executive order by President Coolidge, a copy of which has been received by William B. Hamilton, Collector of Customs in San Francisco. The order was forwarded by R. F. Roemer, acting chief of the finance division of the treasury department.

Favorably reporting a Senate bill authorizing the Southern Pacific to cross the Benecial Arenal in connection with their $12,000,000 Carquinez Strait bridge project, a house military affairs sub-committee added the plan recently, according to dispatches. The Southern Pacific plans to build the bridge from Army Point on the north shore to Suisun Point on the south. The bridge will be 5,597 feet long and will do away with the train ferry at that point.

Before one of the largest attended meetings recently of the city board of trustees of Oakland, held in many months, that body officially went on record as favoring the acquisition of a tract of land necessary for an airport. A committee of five citizens was appointed by the mayor to investigate and clear up certain legal phrases of the matter, the city's financial status and look into likely sites for the proposed airport, and report their findings soon at the regular meeting of the board.

Warning to all state traffic officers to treat infractions of traffic rules by drivers of low numbered cars as others was sent out by Colonel Frank G. Snook, chief of the motor vehicle division a short time ago. The action was taken, Snook said, as the result of reports that immunity against punishment had been granted owners of cars accorded license plates low in numerical rating. "This type of plate carried with it no special privilege or courtesy not extended to every motorist," Snook's order read.

An ordinance limiting oil well drilling to certain sections within the corporate limits of the city of Bakersfield is in process of formation, it was indicated recently by City Manager James Ogden. According to the manager, the city planning commission is studying the problem presented by the rapid encroachment of oil development upon the city, and with the manager is working on an ordinance which would allow drilling in some sections, prohibit it in others, and, according to the manager, "will be satisfactory to all."

Society Man Managing Fighter

Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, Jr., recently bought a share in the managerial rights to Rene de Vos, Belgian featherweight, and didn't see him in action until he visited him in the St. Nicholas gym, New York. Photograph shows a scene that will be re-enacted during the several coming fights—Tony acting as de Vos' second between rounds.

Roettger's Leg Mends and Is Ready to Play

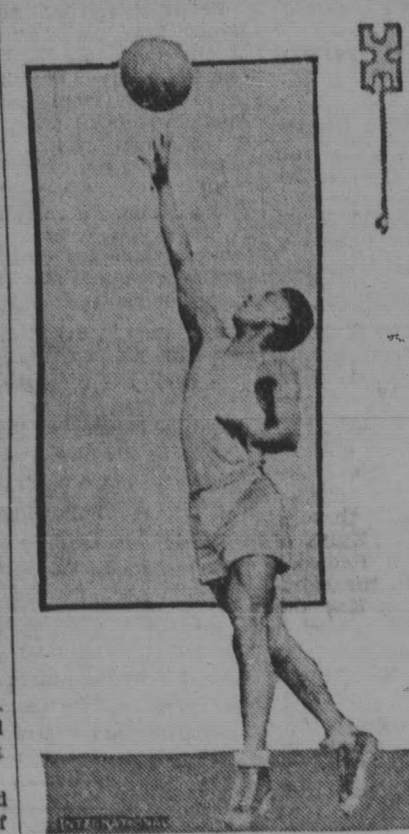

Wallie Roettger, brilliant outfielder of the St. Louis Cardinals during the first half of last season, who broke his right leg in a game with the Cubs on July 4, has mended completely and is ready for the call to Avon park, Fla., the Red Birds' training camp. The state of Wallie's health is of more than passing interest throughout Illinois, partly because he is the basketball coach at Illinois Wesleyan, where his charges have won the Illinois conference championship for three years and have won 72 out of 81 games during his regime.

Roettger was a basketball and baseball star at Illinois, after which he did a stretch at the Cardinal farms in Syracuse and Houston.

He was pounding the ball at better than a 350 clip and was hailed as the third best thrower in the major leagues when he was laid low in a slide into third in the first game of a holiday-double header.

Those who saw him lifted from the ground after the accident, with his toes twisted around to where his heel should have been, voiced the opinion he would never make the big show again. But now there is not a suggestion of a limp when he walks.

Champion Dribbler of Basketball Players

Louis Weller, a Caddo Indian, member of the All-American basketball team of the Haskell Indians, who is known as the champion dribbler of all basketball players of the country. This statement comes from one who should know—Dr. James Naismith, inventor of the game of basketball.

Robertson Is Elected Pilot of Yale Soccer

Reuben B. Robertson, Jr. of Asheville, N. C., a junior in the Scientific school, has been chosen captain of Yale's 1929 soccer team by vote of this season's 15 letter men. He started throughout the past season, in which the Yale team did not lose a game. At the same time it was announced that Edwin N. Dodge, '30, of Minneapolis, would be the manager next season, and that George A. Vogel, '31, of Manassas, N. J., had won the managerial competition and would therefore be assistant manager and manager the following season.

Swimming Prodigy

Little Constance Hanft, eleven-year-old swimming prodigy of the New York N. S. A., who amazed a short while ago by covering 100 yards free style in 1:14 5-5 and 100 yards back stroke in 1:29 3-5 in the home pool the same evening, afforded fresh evidence of her remarkable speed and versatility by doing 100 yards breast stroke in 1:44. The performances are the best ever returned by a lassie under twelve years of age and of slight stature, weighing but 85 pounds.

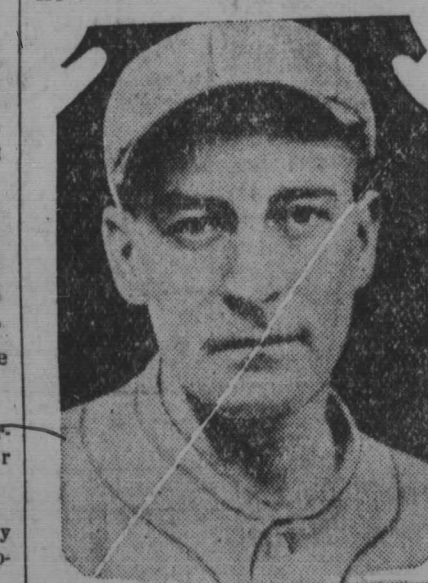

OLD SPITBALLER WAS BIG WINNER

Clarence Mitchell Helped Cardinals Win Flag.

When Frankhouse and Reinhardt, from whom much was expected, failed them last spring, and when them began to go bad in the early summer, the Cardinals had only the three veterans, Haines, Alexander and Sherdel, to carry them through the long pennant grind. It was then that they took a gamble on Clarence Mitchell, who had been given his unconditional release by the Phillies. When Bredon signed Mitchell he made a fine stroke, for the ancient spitballer with the crippled wing suddenly returned to form and pitched and won some vital games for the Cards at a critical time in the pennant race. He was most effective against the Giants, who were the most dangerous contenders for the flag.

Mitchell won eight and lost nine for the Cards last season, but all his defeats with two exceptions were close and finely pitched games with low scores. Clarence pitched fine ball almost every time he took the hill. He was the most effective of all the Cardinal pitchers in the last world series, allowing only two hits in six innings, and many baseball men believe he would have won a game if he had been allowed to start one.

It is to be doubted if any pitcher in major league history has had as much trouble with his arm as has Mitchell. He once said that his arm gave him trouble when he pitched for Red Cloud, Neb., back in 1910 when he was only a kid of nineteen. Since then he has been on the pay roll of three minor league and five major league clubs, working through 18 seasons under this pitching handicap. When he cut loose that deceptive left hand splitter and pitched effectively he always paid for it with a sore arm for a week.

But last season, for the first time in all these years Mitchell was free from trouble with his arm for three months at a stretch.

Mitchell was born near Alliance, Neb., on a farm 37 years ago, and his folks still live on the old home place. He pitched for a semi-pro team in the town of Franklin when only eighteen and won 40 of 44 games that season. He gained much local renown and a Red Cloud contract and a sore arm from his first year on the hill. They must have played mighty fast ball in Red Cloud, Neb., some 16 and 18 years ago, for Mitchell won 14 and lost 13 in that state league circuit. And then two years after his day came Dazzy Vance and won only 13 and lost 14 in that league while pitching for this same Red Cloud club.

Right Umpires Always Sure of Getting Job

There's one good thing about a big league umpire turning manager, and that is he can always get his old job back.

Some years ago Hank O'Day was going about his business of calling 'em right and wrong in the National league when Garry Herrman drafted him to manage the Cincinnati Reds. Hank was not much of a success as a manager and when he was released he was welcomed back to his old job as umpire by the league.

George Moriarty quit umpiring in the American league two years ago to take Ty Cobb's place as manager of the Tigers. Moriarty, after a poor season last year, was given his release by Frank Navin.

But good umpires are scarce these days, and Moriarty wasn't out of a job long, as it was announced at the meeting in Chicago that he would be back in the American league next season as an umpire.

Lee, Macon Outfielder, Boosted by Nap Rucker

Nap Rucker, scout of the Brooklyn club, said that the Macon club has a budding young outfielder in Lee. Nap didn't know his first name, but he knew a lot about his ball playing and said the youngster would be ready for the Robins in 1930.

"Lee is one of the most promising young outfielders I ever looked at," said Rucker. "He is big, fast and can hit. All that he lacks now is experience and he will get plenty of that in another season."

"He is a right-handed hitter and puts plenty of power behind his swing. He should be ready for big league baseball by 1930."

The Macon club is owned by the Robins.

Kentucky Races

Col. M. J. Winn, president of the American Turf association, and executive director of Churchill Downs, announces that he will submit to the Kentucky state racing commission for its approval dates for the spring meeting at Churchill Downs. The meeting will begin Saturday, May 11, it is planned, and the $500,000 added Kentucky derby will be run Saturday, May 18. The meeting will run 19 days, according to plans as now outlined.

Jakle May, Cincinnati southpaw, pitched only one full game in 1928, and that was a shutout victory over the Giants in June. Illness and a sore arm kept him out of action.

MY FAVORITE STORIES

By IRVIN S. COBB

The Deadly Blow

THE late Alf T. Ringling, of Ringling brothers, loved the lore of the circus. In his library he had countless books and pictures and documents and ancient posters all pertaining to life under the big tops. Also he knew hundreds of anecdotes, humorous and otherwise, modern and ancient, which related to some aspect or another of the business which he, all his active life, had followed. A year or two before his death he told me this one:

It was back in the days before the Ringling show had attained large proportions, when Barnum and Bailey's circus was, as his billing proclaimed, "The Greatest Show on Earth." James A. Bailey was the junior partner in the nightly enterprise, but that master showman, P. T. Barnum, being still in good health, remained in active charge.

The aggregation, with its menagerie, its three rings and its elevated stages and hippodrome track, and all, was touring the South. A day or two earlier, an acrobat who just had closed with a traveling burlesque troupe—by special request of its manager—applied for a job with the circus and was given one. His act did not give full satisfaction to the Ring director, who so reported to the performer and told him that his work fell short of the desired standard.

"You recommended yourself pretty highly when you came around the other day," said Mr. Barnum. "In fact, as I recall, you told me you were the best man in your line anywhere. Now I hear that you haven't made good."

Being an artist, the young man naturally had his share of temperament. "Is that so?" he answered with heavy sarcasm. "Well, lemme tell you somethin'. There ain't nobody can reflect on my abilities without answerin' to me. Why I'm the guy that's makin' the show what it is. If I hear any more of this sort of talk, I'll quit."

"All right, then, quit," said the famous showman.

"You said it," answered the indignant trouper. "I'm out. I've resigned. Do you know what that means, Mr. Barnum?"

"I think so," said the older man. "It means you're quit."

"Think again. Do you happen to know what town this is?"

"Certainly I do—Pine Bluff."

"Now you've got it. Here, right in the middle of the season, I'm leavin' Barnum and Bailey's circus flat on its back in Pine Bluff, Arkansas."

Tribute Where Tribute Was Due

YEARS ago in one of the smaller cities along the eastern seaboard, the local leader of the dominant political party was one Mr. Michael Dempsey. Mr. Dempsey carried the organization in the hollow, as the saying goes, of his hand. True there was a selfish motive behind his activities, because he held the most lucrative local office within the gift of the populace.

As might be inferred from his name, he was of Celtic antecedents. Naturally, what with his powers of leadership and his compelling personality, he was the idol of all the Irishmen among his constituents. Those among them who had come, as he had, penniless greenhorns from the Old country, regarded him as the greatest man in the state if not in the nation.

In the fullness of time, and largely through his patriotic efforts, a bond issue was voted for the erection of a new county building. On the day after the cornerstone of the new structure had been laid, two of his followers chanced to pass the spot. Upon the face of the stone, in the customary Latin mementos, the year had been engraved, as follows:

MICCCXXIX.

One of the passersby stared at this curious inscription. He spelled out the letters. To him they had no meaning.

"Larry," he said wonderingly to his companion, "what's the purpose of that?"

"Simple enough," said his learned friend, "that MD stands for Mike Dempsey, and thim three C's in a row means Clerk of the County Court."

"It's merely a deserved tribute to Mike that's been carved here."

"Yes," said the first speaker, thoroughly convinced, "but what does the 'thim' mark stand for?"

"Oh, thim!" said the scholar. "That's just to keep track of the times when he's ticked the d-n Republicans."

All questions and responses at the wedding were in the sign language.

Hen 'Gators
Henry Crawford, a negro at Kinston, N. C., is exhibiting four baby alligators which he said were hatched by a hen on a farm near there. The 'gators are about five inches long. Crawford said he found an alligator's nest in Pamlico county several weeks ago. He brought a number of the eggs home with him and placed them, together with chicken eggs, under the hen. The chicken eggs failed to hatch, but the little 'gators seemed to appease the hen.

Scraping the Legal Barnacles

THERE is a definite need in state and nation alike for simplification in laws, particularly in criminal procedure. At present there is so much legal chaos connected with criminal cases that justice is either delayed or defeated.

So rapid has been our national, state and civic growth that laws which were valuable and effective a generation ago are now impractical. Yet little effort is made to change them or to have them removed from the statutes. Occasionally we hear of some such obsolete law being invoked in order to further the plans of some particular faction, in spite of the fact that it may have been forgotten for years.

The legal system of the British Empire is more accurate and immediate, with the result that a high percentage of criminals are caught and convicted, and crime is discouraged. A simple, but complete criminal code that is unhampered by legal loopholes will do more to discourage crime than a thousand ordinances which merely restrict the law-abiding citizen, to the safety and advantage of the crook.

If every city ordinance, county ordinance and be more applicable to the period for which they are intended to serve. This, we believe, would do away with a lot of dead timber, simplify procedure, create a more wholesome respect for the law, state law were passed for a period of years only, and at the expiration of that term became automatically void unless passed again, the laws would and decrease crime.

Uneasy Lies the Head

"Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown! Nowhere, perhaps, quite so uneasy as in Afghanistan, for news reports have carried the stories of at least three changes in the kingship of that country during the week. The American workman returning at night to his home and to rest enjoys a peace and contentment for which, no doubt, a dozen kings would exchange their kingdoms.

MABLE REAPPOINTED

The U. S. A. is only a few minutes wide

THE Bell System is ever busy reducing the width of America and the distance between cities. For example, in the last five years 350 major improvements, as well as thousands of others whose aggregate importance mounts high, have been made in telephone central office equipment. Improved operating practices have eliminated the necessity of your "hanging up" and being called back in 95 per cent of toll and long distance calls, adding new speed and ease to out of town calling. You hold the wire and the operator does the rest.

Since New Year's Day, 1927, the average time for completing all out of town calls has been cut 35 per cent and at the same time the per cent of error has been further materially reduced. There is no standing still in the Bell System. Better and better telephone service at the lowest cost is the goal. Present improvements constantly going into effect are but the foundation for the future's greater service.

COASTSIDE CANNERY TO PACK ARTICHOKES

Andrew Gilcrest, field representative of the Nielsen Packing Company, is busy signing contracts with Coastside artichoke growers for the supplying of the local cannery with 200 tons of artichokes.

Canning will start on this crop about March 1, according to A. W. Claudio, Halfmoon Bay superintendent. It is expected that the Halfmoon Bay plant will can more than 8000 acres of artichokes.

The Brussels sprout canning season is now drawing to a close, after a production of more than 25,000 cases. The output has been disposed of easily, and the demand could not have been met with less than 5000 cases more. The crop contracted for by the cannor has been packed, and no more can be purchased, due to the high prices received for the green sprouts.—Halfmoon Bay Review.

A Receipt That Saved Money

That it pays to keep receipts was fully demonstrated last Monday when Edward Doyle of Menlo Park walked into the office of Auditor Shields and presented a receipt for taxes on the Doyle Estate at Menlo Park paid in 1923 by the late John T. Doyle, a leader of the bar of the state in his day.

The tax expert employed by the supervisors two years ago to go over all the tax rolls for delinquencies, discovered many errors. He found that numerous large holdings and small ones as well had failed to pay taxes in certain years and among them was the Doyle estate. It was shown by the record that no taxes were paid for 1923 on the report.

The amount sought to be recovered was several hundred dollars. Of course, when Doyle presented his receipt that settled the question. It appears that the wise old attorney always put his receipts away in his safe at his home. When his son received the belated tax bill he at once sought the safe and found the receipt.

John T. Doyle was the best known lawyer of his time. His greatest achievement was the winning of the famous Pious Fund case. This suit was brought by the Archbishop of the diocese of San Francisco against the Government of Mexico to recover money unlawfully taken from the church in early days. Doyle spent the greater portion of his life in fighting the suit, finally winning it in the courts of France a short time before his death. Millions of dollars were involved in the famous litigation.

But they would prove it, he was confident. So confident, indeed, that before he left he inquired the make and cost of my car. Evidently he has already mentally banked the reward.

On the other hand, certain things seem to me still to be far from clear. Hallday, I understand, passed over to the police the following facts:

(a) A copy of the undated letter from Horace Porter to some unknown person, a description of the print of a hand, left on the window board.

(b) A small illustration from the book "Eugenia Riggs and her Phenomena," and showing the same hand print.

(c) A sworn statement of the Livingston's butler, the nature of which I do not know.

(d) An analysis of his own theory of the experiments referred to in the diary.

(e) And a letter to Edith from an anonymous correspondent. (To be referred to later.)

(f) The possibility that the two attempts to enter the main house are due to the fact that, in the haste of the escape, something was left there which is both identifying and incriminating.

But so far as I can discover, he has not told them that, from the time the guards were taken away from the house at night, he was on watch there.

In other words, from shortly after the murder he must have known that something incriminating had been left there, when Bethel and his accomplices, Gordon's "outside man," made their escape the night the secretary was murdered. He may even know what it is, and where. But he has not told Greenough.

Again, there is the fact that a statement by the Livingston's butler was a portion of the evidence he submitted. Surely they are not endeavoring to incriminate Livingston!

September 9.

It is Hallday's idea to hold another session, using Cameron's coming as the excuse for it. I gather that he believes that, under cover of the session, another attempt may be made to secure the incriminating evidence left in the house. Not that he says so, but his questions concerning the sounds I heard in the hall during the second session point in that direction.

"This verbal odor you speak of, Skipper," he asked, "was that before you heard the movement outside?"

"Some time before. Yes. But the odor seemed to be in the room; the sounds were beyond the door."

"You don't connect them, then?"

"I didn't thought about it, but I don't believe I do."

"Did you hear any footsteps?"

"I had to consider that. 'Not footsteps; there was a sort of scraping along the floor.'"

"And the moment you spoke this noise ceased?"

"Yes."

The whole situation is baffling in the extreme. I cannot ignore the fact that the sessions were proposed by Mrs. Livingston, that it was she who left the hall door unbolts at the second sitting, or that Livingston himself was absent that second night, presumably ill. At the same time, it was Livingston who indirectly advised me against the sessions.

"Let it alone," he warned me. "Let well enough alone."

So far as Hallday is concerned, it is clear that he does not like the idea of another session, but feels that it is necessary. He assures me the police will be on hand, inside and outside the house, but he does not minimize the fact that there will be a certain risk, and that he dreads taking Jane and Edith into it.

"It's like this," he said today, feeling painfully for words. "In a sense, you and I are at the parting of the ways in this thing. We can let it go and turn loose on the world a cruel and deadly idea which may go on claiming victims indefinitely. He made a small gesture. "Or—we put into the other side of the scale all we have in the world, and then—"

He pulled himself up. "Unless only possible danger," he said. "Unless things slip, there should be very little."

The same idea of these present sessions before. There is an unconscious emphasis placed by Hallday on Hayward and Livingston, but perhaps I am overwatchful.

I dare say, thus placed between my duty and my fears, I shall do my duty. I perceive that either Hayward or Livingston is once more to be allowed access to the house, and under conditions more or less favorable to him.

Later, I have done my duty. I have telephoned Cameron, and he will come out tomorrow night.

September 10.

Hallday has taken every possible precaution as to tonight. As it has been our custom to go over the house before each session, and as Cameron may do this with unusual thoroughness, it has been decided not to place Greenough and his officers until after the sitting begins. Hallday has therefore today connected the bell from that room, which rings in the kitchen, to a temporary extension in the garage, with a buzzer. When the lights are lowered, he will touch the bell, and Greenough is then to smuggle his men in through the kitchen.

While no one can say what changes Cameron may suggest in our previous methods, Hallday imagines he will ask us at first to proceed as usual. In any event, I am to sit as near to the switch as possible, and when Hallday calls for lights, am to be ready to turn them on.

8:30. Everything is ready. But I am concerned about Hallday. Has he some apprehension about his own safety tonight?

He came an hour or so too early to start with the car for Cameron, and borrowing pen and paper, wrote a long communication to Flemingway. What is it I do not know, but he took it with him, to mail on his way to the station.

(End of Mr. Porter's Journal)

CONCLUSION

Chapter I

The Journal takes us up to the evening of September 10, 1922. It was to the fourth and last tragedy of that summer, which filled the next day's papers, that little Pettigall referred. In the conversation recorded in the introduction of this Journal.

It was with this tragedy that, as Pettigall said aggrievedly, the story "quit" on them. And quit it did. We felt then that the best thing to do, under the circumstances, was to let it rest.

There was nothing to be gained by giving the story to the public, and much to be lost. At that time, it is to be remembered, a wave of spiritualism, or rather spiritism, was spreading over the country; it was still filled, too, with post-war psychopaths. The very nature of the experiment which had been tried was of the sort to seize on the neurotic imagination, and set it aflame. It was not considered advisable to allow it publicity.

Now, of course, things are different. The search goes on, and perhaps some day, not by this method but by several legitimate and scientific ones, survival may be proved. I do not know. I do not greatly care. After all, I am a Christian, and my faith is built on a life after death. But I accept that; I do not require proof of it.

Picture us, then, that evening of September 10, when the Journal ends, waiting for we knew not what; Jane picking up her knitting and putting it down again; Edith powdering her nose with hands that shook in spite of her best efforts; Hallday at the railroad station with the car to meet Cameron; and off in the woodland, where the red lamp of the flashlight flashed the danger signal every ten seconds from the end of Robinson's point, Greenough and a half dozen officers.

Picture us, too, when we had all gathered; Cameron, with his hand still bandaged, presented to the dramatics person of the play and eyeing each one in turn shrewdly; Mrs. Livingston gurgling and uneasy; and Livingston a sort of waxy white and with a nervous trembling I had never observed before. Of us all, only Hallday seemed natural. And Hayward, natural because he was never at ease.

What Cameron made of it I do not know. Very probably he was in us a group of sensation-seekers, excited by some small contact with a world beyond our knowledge, and if he felt surprised at all, it was that I had joined the ranks.

He himself did not appear to take the matter seriously. He made it plain that he had come in this manner at my request; that his own methods would be entirely different. When Edith, I think it was, asked him if he made any preparation for such affairs, he laughed and shook his head.

"Except that I sometimes take a cup of coffee to keep me awake!" he said. On the way up the drive I walked with Livingston. Why, I hardly know, except that he seemed to drift toward me. He never spoke but once, and it seemed to me that he was surveying the shrubbery and trees, like a man who suspected a trap. Once—he was on my left—I was aware that he had put his hand to his hip pocket, and I was so startled that I stumbled and almost fell. I knew, as confident as I have ever known anything, that he had a revolver there.

"Careful, man," he said. Those were his only words during our slow progress toward the main house, and so tense were his nerves that they sounded like a curse.

Cameron and Edith were leading, and I could hear her talking, carrying on valiantly, although as it turned out she knew better than any of us except Hallday, the terrible possibilities ahead. Hayward walked alone and behind us, his rubber-soled shoes making no sound on the drive. It made me uneasy, somehow; that silent progress of his; it was stealthy and disconcerting. And I think Livingston felt it so, too, for he stopped once and turned around.

Yet, at the time, as between the two men, my suspicion that evening certainly pointed to Livingston. Not to go into the cruelty of my ignorance, a cruelty which I now understand but then bitterly resented, I had had both men under close observation during the time we waited for Cameron. And it had seemed to me that Livingston was the more uneasy of the two. Another thing which I regarded as highly significant was his asking for water just before we left the Lodge, and holding the glass with a trembling hand.

And, as it happens, it was that very glass of water which crystallized my suspicions. The glass and the hand which held it. For the hand was a small and wide one, with a short thumb and a bent little finger!

From that time on, my mind was focused on Livingston. It milled about, seeking some explanation. I could see Livingston in the case plainly enough; I could see him, pursuing with old Bethel the "sinister design" to which Gordon had referred, but to which I had no key. I could see him, with his knowledge of the country, using that knowledge in furtherance of that idea which my Uncle Horace had termed a menace to society in general. With the swiftness with which thought creates vision, I could even see him halting poor Maggie Morrison in the storm, and her stopping her truck when she recognized him.

But I could not see him in connection with Eugenia Riggs and her bowl of putty. Strange that I did not; that it required Jane's smelling salts for me to find that connection. A small green glass bottle, in Edith's room, used as a temporary paper weight on her desk.

As I say, my suspicions were of Livingston, during that strange walk up the drive. But I had by no means eliminated Hayward.

He was there, behind me, walking with a curious stealth, and with an uneasiness that somehow, without words, communicated itself to me.

All emotions are waves, I daresay. I caught the contagion of fear from him; desperate, deadly fear.

And once to the house, my suspicions of him increased rather than diminished. For one thing, he offered to take Cameron through the house, and on Hallday's ignoring that, and met, and the guitar strings was right ly touched.

And once to the house, my suspicions of him increased rather than diminished. For one thing, he offered to take Cameron through the house, and on Hallday's ignoring that, and

Without warning Cameron turned on the lamp; the curtain subsided and all sounds ceased. He was apparently satisfied, and after a few moments of experiment with the lamp, he resulting only in a creaking and knocking on the table, again extinguished it. On a repetition of the blowing out of the curtain, however, he left his chair for the first time, and with a pocket flash examined the cabinet thoroughly, even the wall coming in for close inspection.

When he had finished with that, however, I sensed a change in him. I believe now that he suspected fraud, but I am not certain. He said rather sharply that he was there in good faith and not to provide an evening's amusement, and that he hoped any suspicious movement would be reported.

"This is not a game," he said shortly. Jane was very quiet, and now I heard again the heavy breathing which I knew preceded the trance condition, or that auto-hypnotism which we know as trance.

"Who is that?" Cameron asked in a low tone.

"Mrs. Porter," Hallday said. "Quiet, everybody!"

The room was completely dark, and save for Jane's heavy breathing, entirely quiet. Strangely enough, for the moment I forgot our purpose there; forgot Greenough and his men, scattered through the house; I had a premonition, if I may call it that, that we were on the verge of some tremendous psychic experience. I can not explain it; I do not know now what unseen forces were gathered there together. I even admit that probably I too, like Jane, had hypnotized myself.

And then two things were happening, and at the same time.

There was something moving in the library, a soft footfall with it seemed to me, an irregularly. For all the world like the dragging of a partially useless foot, and—Livingstone was quietly releasing his grip of my hand.

I made a clutch at him, and he whispered savagely: "Let go, you fool!"

The next moment he had drawn his revolver, and was stealthily getting to his feet.

The dragging foot moved out into the hall. Livingstone, revolver in hand, was standing beside me, and there was a quiet movement across the table. Cameron was apparently listening also; he made no comment, however, and the darkness and the silence the footstep went into the hall, and there ceased.

I had no idea of the passage of time ten seconds or an hour. Livingstone may have stood beside me. Ten seconds or an hour, and then Greenough's voice at the top of the staircase:

Livingstone moved then. He made a wild dash for the red lamp and turned it on. Hayward was not to be seen, and Hallday, revolver in hand, was starting for the cabinet.

"More light," he called. "Light! Quick!"

I had a confused impression of Hallday, jerking the curtains of the cabinet aside; of somebody else there with him, both on guard, as it were, at the wall; of some sort of rapid movement; of the door from the hall into the hall being open where it had been closed before, and of a crash somewhere not far away, as of a falling body, followed by a sort of dreadful pause.

And all this is in the time it took me to get around the chairs and to the wall switch near the door. And it was then in the shocked silence which followed the sound of that fall, in the instant between my finding the switch and turning it on, that I will swear that I saw once more by the glow of the red lamp the figure at the foot of the stairs, looking up.

Saw it and recognized it. Watched it turn toward me with fixed and staring eyes, felt the cold wind which suddenly eddied about me, and frantically turning on the light, saw it fade like smoke into the empty air.

Behind the curtains of the cabinet somebody was working at the wall. Edith, very pale, was supporting Jane, who still remained in her strange auto-hypnotic condition. Livingston's arm was about his wife.

And this was the picture when Greenough came running triumphantly down the stairs, the reward apparently in his pocket, and saw us there. He paid no attention to the rest of us, but stared at Livingston with eyes which could not believe what they saw.

"Good God—d!" he said. "Then who is there?"

He pointed to the wall behind the cabinet.

Wide Awake

It was after dusk and yet the two young people sitting close together in the park made no attempt to depart.

Presently a keeper came in sight, going his rounds before closing the gates.

"Sorry to disturb ye," he said to the idlers, "but it's too late for ye to be sitting here."

The youth was apologetic.

"I didn't realize it was so late," he murmured. "We are going to be married next year."

"Sure, now," returned the park keeper, "do you think I'm fool enough to suppose you was married last year?"—Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

Brazil Roads

Overabundance of patience, plenty of luck, and a large measure of stamina are the three essential qualities that motorists in South America must possess, particularly when traveling over Brazilian roads. In southern Brazil roads are not only almost impassable most of the time, but are generally hopelessly impossible from the standpoint of touring comfort. Traveling there constitutes one of the most severe tests to which motor cars and tires can be subjected.

HOW TO LIVE LONGER

By JOHN CLARENCE FUNK

"ATTENTION!"

AFTER enlistment one of the first things a rookie learns is correct posture. When the command, "Attention!" is given, the young soldier places his feet at an angle of forty-five degrees, throws his shoulders back, his head up, draws in his chin and keeps his abdomen on as straight a line as possible.

Of course discipline is one of the main factors in this attention attitude. But there is more to it than that. Army and navy surgeons well know that faulty posture causes fatigue and interferes with the functions of the vital organs. Moreover, they realize that personal morale and brain power are more likely to be at top-notch in a person who walks and thinks straight than otherwise. And what is true in the service is equally true in civilian life. The body functions best when carried as nature intended it to be carried.

It is quite true that men are more likely to be offenders in this regard than are women. An innate pride sustains the latter which unfortunately is usually lacking in the former. One has only to see careless people become regarding the proper carriage of their bodies. And the main reason is sometimes much deeper than it appears to be on the surface. It is a state of mind, based on physical fitness.

The person who is bubbling over with vim, vigor and vitality just naturally carries himself properly. And the converse is equally true. To be a slouch indicates either an inexcusable state of mind or a decided lack of physical resiliency commonly known as "zip."

If you are walking with drooping shoulders, if you are hollow chested, if you shuffle along with head down, if you take a square look at yourself, you will know immediately if your careless attitude is merely a mental slip or if it is deeper-seated. If the former, start to remedy it at once through your own efforts. Use your will power to do it. You will be positively surprised how soon you will be stepping out with the best of them, looking and acting the man that you really are.

On the other hand, if you are tired and lack the "get-up" that you so much envy in others then walk as fast as you can to your doctor, tell him your troubles, let him prescribe the remedy and then take it conscientiously. Perhaps it will be a habit or so but will have to go by the board. Again, it may mean more fresh air or exercise, more or less work or food.

In any event, whatever it is that you need to bring you out of the slouch class take your medicine like a man. The world loves the physically fit and frowns upon others. Therefore, "Attention! Forward march!"

"SLOWER, PLEASE!"

A CERTAIN gentleman of mature age, fortunate in the possession of two boys just returned from college for their mid-year vacation, accepted their invitation to join with them in a hockey game. He was fair, fat and fifty; and his exercise for the last two years up to that time had largely been taken in his high-powered car, with an occasional stroll over the golf course.

"I'll show these kids that Dad's still got the old stuff in him," he whispered to a friend as he boldly struck out on the smooth ice. And he did show them too. He played a fine game and kept the admiring boys very much on their toes. He hadn't been an athlete for nothing. Mr. certainly not!

But that evening Dad breathed a heavy sigh and two days later his earthly journey found its inevitable destination in a newly dug grave. Dad had merely permitted his enthusiasm to get the better of his body—and his body got the better of him! A sad story, but a true one.

No, it cannot be done safely, this dropping back into violent exercise after a lapse of years of comparative inactivity. Neither men nor women have any right to assume that their bodies, and especially their hearts, can thus suddenly be thrown into high gear and run at a speed which nature intended only for younger people.

It is all right to have a youthful spirit out the average heart at fifty and even at forty is no longer young, and care must accordingly be exercised in exercising. Everyone of middle age or over should politely respect this fact and decline sudden and sustained exertion of any kind.

Exercise! Most certainly keep in good physical condition by long brisk walks, golf, setting up exercises or any other form of mild exertion that strikes your fancy. But don't get stuck up about your prowess and assume a "just-as-young-as-I-used-to-be" attitude. In that case your head is playing a serious joke on the rest of you. And believe it or not, the rest of you matters very much in this business of living and long life.

POULTRY FACTS

COD LIVER OIL AIDS EARLY CHICK

Three Tests Made at North Carolina Station.

Three separate tests made lately at the North Carolina experiment station prove the value of 1 per cent of cod liver oil in the mash feed supplied to early hatched chicks.

"Chicks reared in our laboratories where we could control nearly all conditions have proven the value of cod liver oil in the mash feed," declares Dr. B. F. Kaupp, head of the poultry department at State college. "One lot of chicks fed a complete ration except for the vitamins, broke in health in the fifth week. The chicks receiving 1 per cent of the tested oil in the same kind of mash did not break in health and were strong and well developed. In a second test, the chicks which were not allowed to run out-of-doors nor receive direct sunlight gave us exactly the same results. Those receiving the oil were strong and well and were sold as broilers. Those receiving only the straight mash and grain feed broke in health at the end of the fifth week."

Doctor Kaupp states that a third flock was carried on the basic ration without oil but were given all the tender rape that they would eat. These broke in health in the seventh week indicating that they secured some vitamins from the green feed but not enough to keep them in good health.

In another test, at the coastal plain station, one lot of chicks was allowed to run on a fresh, green pasture three or four hours during the middle of the day with the result that they did not break in health but were not so large and strong as the chicks in the cod liver oil flock. Doctor Kaupp states that those chicks which run out-of-doors pick up other things which are required for good health and development, but usually this is not sufficient as the tests with the cod liver oil show.

As a result of all the tests, Doctor Kaupp believes that the expense of using 1 per cent of this oil is well worth while. It holds up the health and gives stronger constitutional vigor.

Coccidiosis Is Very Destructive to Chicks

Coccidiosis is a disease of the intestines and while it affects all birds it is especially destructive to chicks up to two months old. The cause is a microscopic organism. The transmission of infection from diseased to healthy birds occurs by contamination of the feed, water and ground. The coccidia multiply with great rapidity in the intestines and enormous numbers are discharged in the droppings.

The most prominent and characteristic symptoms in newly hatched chicks are white, diarrheal discharges and the rapid wasting away of the affected birds. Adult birds have considerable resistance to this germ and the disease is frequently seen in the chronic form.

There is no satisfactory cure for this disease in young chickens.

Balanced Ration for Hens Very Important

Until about fifty years ago chickens were fed only grain and since they were permitted to range at will they secured their essential requirements so they could live and lay some eggs during the spring. About this time it was discovered that additional protein in form of meat or milk fed with the grains became known as the balanced ration—a ration in which the surplus carbohydrates of the grains were balanced in better proportion by adding a protein concentrate. It was the balanced ration that first made commercial poultry keeping possible, but in the light of recent information on the nutrition of chickens, the poultryman's feeding problem of today is to complete the balanced ration.

Age to Keep Hens

With Leghorns, Anconas, Minorcas and birds of this type, the hens of the right type may be kept until they are three years old. It is not usually advisable to keep them after they have reached three years of age. With the general purpose breeds, such as Rhode Island Reds, Plymouth Rocks, Orpingtons, etc., it is usually best to sell them after they are two years old. Extremely valuable hens can sometimes be kept five years, but this is quite unusual.

Thin-Shelled Eggs

Whenever there is a late spring with a great deal of cloudy weather, many flocks lay thin-shelled eggs. The egg-shell quality from such a flock will begin to improve as soon as the hens get into direct sunlight. It is a common observation that when a flock is laying thin-shelled eggs and is turned out-of-doors in the sun, the shell quality improves. It is very important in managing a flock to open the windows on sunny days during the winter or early spring.

Hens Produce Well

Tests at the Wisconsin experiment station show that hens kept out of the direct sunlight for months, will lay well and produce normal eggs if they are fed a mash containing 5 per cent of cod liver oil or if the flock is given a daily exposure to the quartz mercury lamp. This may be very important during cold, cloudy weather in January and February. Whenever the sun shines its rays should be utilized in so far as possible by fowls of different ages.

Denotes Concealed Evil

"There is something rotten in Denmark," is said of a concealed evil. Thousands of persons use this saying continually without having the least suspicion as to its source. It is based on a passage in Shakespeare's "Hamlet." In the fourth scene of the first act of that play Marcellus, an officer of the watch, says to Hamlet's friend Horatio: "Something is rotten in the state of Denmark." The remark was made after Hamlet followed the ghost of his father from the platform before the castle.

Dorothy's Mother Proves Claim

Children don't ordinarily take to medicines but here's one that all of them love. Perhaps it shouldn't be called a medicine at all. It's more like a rich, concentrated food. It's pure, wholesome, sweet to the taste and sweet in your child's little stomach. It builds up and strengthens weak, puny, underweight children, makes them eat heartily, brings the roses back to their cheeks, makes them playful, energetic, full of life. And no bilious, headachy, constipated, feverish, fretful baby or child ever failed to respond to the gentle influence of California Fig Syrup on their little bowels. It starts lazy bowels quick, cleans them out thoroughly, tones and strengthens them so they continue to act normally, of their own accord.

Millions of mothers know about California Fig Syrup from experience. A Western mother, Mrs. J. G. Moore, 110 Cliff Ave., San Antonio, Texas, says: "California Fig Syrup is certainly all that's claimed for it. I have proved that with my little Dorothy. She was a bottle baby and very delicate. Her bowels were weak. I started her on Fig Syrup when she was a few months old and it regulated her, quick. I have used it with her ever since for colds and every little set-back and her wonderful condition tells better than words how it helps."

Don't be imposed on. See that the Fig Syrup you buy bears the name, "California" so you'll get the genuine, famous for 50 years.

Geyser May Yield Power
Some day scientists believe the power developed by live steam tapped from the Sonora county geyser district in California will be enough to light all the towns and cities in the state and run all its street cars, trains and factories. The big problem is to draw off the steam and harness it to power units. Dr. E. T. Allen, of the Carnegie Institute, has had six wells drilled 200 to 500 feet deep, one of which delivers 50,000 pounds of steam an hour. The roar of the escaping steam can be heard for miles.—Capper's Weekly.

Professional Perquisites

The fifth-grade children were rehearsing a Christmas play, and one of the boys objected to the part that had been assigned to him, although it had only a few lines and a gorgeous costume. Being pressed for his reasons for objecting, he finally muttered: "Heck, all the other kids get to eat candy and nuts in the feast, and I am not in that scene!"

MENLO PARK

The following officers of Menlo Park, N. S. G. W. will be installed by Deputy Grand President Waterman of Palo Alto on January 31: S. M. Shortridge, president; John Shortridge, first vice-president; Adolph Arallaris, second vice-president; Foster Andrews, third vice-president; F. W. Johnson, secretary; R. O. Lacroix, financial secretary; Roland Midge, treasurer; George Murray, marshal; George Barron, inside sentinel, and Clifford Marks, outside sentinel.

James Hopkins is seriously ill at the home of his sister, Mrs. B. Burke, on the highway. Hopkins is an old time horseman, having been a trainer at the Stanford Stock Farm in its palmy days. He had charge of the noted trotter, Palo Alto when that animal won fame in capturing the championship in the eighties.

A St. Patrick's Day celebration committee has been appointed to take charge of the annual entertainment in the Hall of the Nativity on Saturday evening, March 16. A meeting of the citizens on Sunday, J. W. Morey and Adrian Ward were appointed to take full management of the affair. A splendid program is promised on that evening, including all that has ever been rendered in this city.

The city council met in regular session Tuesday evening. All the members were present. Ordinance No. 29 as amended was read, licensing dances at $15 a quarter. It was taken under advisement for further consideration.

City Attorney Whitworth presented a resolution exempting from taxation certain property in the Hermosa Tract belonging to the Veterans Welfare Bureau. Same was accepted by the council.

The city attorney was given further time to give a written report on the question of the raise of salary of the treasurer.

Blake reminded the council that the contingent fund of the chief of police was depleted and moved that the sum of $300 be transferred from other funds for that purpose. Weeden reminded Blake that only $100 could be secured, according to the police ordinance, whereupon the council by unanimous vote appropriated $100 for the contingent fund for the police department.

Commissioner Walker called attention to the poor condition of several streets in the city. He explained that he had consulted Harpigny, material supplier, and found that grading, macadamizing and scarifying could be done for three fourths of a cent per square foot. He urged that action be done in the matter. After some discussion the commissioner was empowered to have Cambridge avenue repaired as outlined by the commissioner, said repairs not to cost more than $300.

Chairman Ellis read in a clear voice the following address in regard to the recall election:

Gentlemen:

I do not intend to discuss, offend, or importune any matter which is before you for consideration tonight, but, in order that I may be neither misunderstood nor misquoted, I am asking your indulgence while I read to you what I have written as my best thought and final personal decision on the subject of the Recall Petition.

I am convinced that what we most need and must have is a closer communion between the residents of this community and a greater cooperation in matters of importance to all citizens.

The stability of any community rests with its intelligent residents. The intelligence of the people of Menlo Park should not, however, be modified by indifference. We are too prone to give very little attention to our civic duties and responsibilities, and to participate in primaries and elections in only the most casual way. It is increasingly more essential that we regard the right to vote, not alone from the standpoint of the privilege it confers but from that of the duty it imposes. It is decidedly needful that all equipped with the right to vote should play his or her part in the selection of our city officials, as the opportunity offers, for the ultimate purpose of any election is only to secure and maintain the progress and prosperity of the community.

When the residents of a city elect a few men to head their local government, they expect such men to exercise their good judgment and to exercise a certain amount of leadership. Therefore they should carefully consider and endeavor to select the best men for the job. They should have confidence and in whose leadership they foresee, to a certain extent, a reflection of their own desires as to a practical and progressive administration. Then, after a selection has been made, we should still take an active and interested part in the affairs of our local government. Participation should be immediately replaced by community interest and our city's interests are still the responsibility of every resident within its confines. It is the duty of its officials, the city administration should constantly be strengthened and backed by the co-operation of our entire citizenry. And remember, it is not our duty to co-operate to attempt to destroy simply because someone does not agree with us. We would not welcome helpful hints from each and every citizen. The position of city official, of any community, is not one of joy and ease—it carries responsibilities and the necessity for making decisions which cannot possibly please all of the people. We should remember that no man elected to public office, citizen here or elsewhere, is such an invulnerable, or has such a tremendous grasp of all the affairs of his community, or has such a complete grasp of all the problems, that he cannot make a mistake or cannot be helped by the advice and co-operation of intelligent citizens who are familiar with particular problems and have rational and constructive ideas as to their solution.

But, does the average city government receive the active and intelligent support of a courageous citizenship giving their energy and intelligent knowledge to the work of maintaining the best interests of the community? No—they do not. Serving their fellow citizens—and that with no pay, salary, or compensation of any kind—they are left to do the best they can with no encouragement in their efforts, but plenty of criticism.

Criticism of public officials is all right—people may need to be reminded of their positions as representatives of the people, and if they are the best interests of their fellow citizens, they should be sharply challenged to do so. It is not criticism until insincerity is proven. And then we have our remedy—not in abuse but in the ballot box.

What is now our situation here? Since the last meeting of the council, at which time the petition for recall election was rejected by this body, its proponents have filed suit in the District Court of Appeals, seeking a writ of Mandamus to compel this council to call an election for the recall of certain of its members; and they seek this writ with the ruthless intent of carrying out the highest of their duty, the great expense of defending such litigation must be paid from out the city treasury.

I am still of the opinion that the petition filed with this council is insufficient, for the reason that too many of the signatures were obtained through falsehood, misrepresentation, and fraud. I believe that where fraud enters in, the whole case is void from its beginning. I am firmly of the opinion that, if this case were contested, fought, and carried to the highest court, the decision of this council would be sustained, the petition declared bad, and the writ denied. But, as an official of the City of Menlo Park, and as one having the best interests of the people of this community at heart, I am in favor of filing an answer to the petition for Writ of Mandamus in order that the issue may be brought before the Court.

I am very earnest about this, because of the fact that, in order to contest this election further, it would place a heavy burden upon the City of Menlo Park, for, under the provisions of the Civil Code of the State of California, the City is required to bear all of the expense entailed in such litigation.

If the Court then decides, upon the showing made, to issue this writ, it is my opinion that this Council should abide by the decision, and I shall favor the immediate call of an election.

But, I wish the citizens to take in this careful consideration the charges which are made against the two members sought to be recalled. In the Petition circulated for this Recall, not one single sound, sensible, or legitimate reason is advanced therefor. Bear in mind that no two members of the council could enact any legislation or put through any certain measures—it requires the affirmative vote of at least three members. Further, bear in mind the fact that every member of this council voted affirmatively upon every proposition that is before the council, and that is the reason for the recall of two of its members. This being so, isn't it logical to suggest that, if the two members sought to be recalled are guilty of any wrong doing, then the remaining members are equally culpable and the entire council should be recalled? Certainly. And just as certainly it is self-evident that the recall of two members of this body would not remedy any implied evil; that there must be some ulterior motive back of this movement; and that the petition is not sincere.

In the event an election should then, as present Mayor and Chairman of our council, I urge the citizens of this community to consider carefully their desires, disregarding appeals to passion or to prejudice, dedicating themselves truly and wholly to the welfare of our city. I have sufficient faith in the good and fair judgment of the citizens of Menlo Park to believe they will not be misled, but will render an equitable decision at the polls, with resultant justice and credit to our community.

In the short space of time prior to such a possible election, every fair-minded, level-headed citizen can perform a public service of paramount importance by setting both rumor and unjust accusation and calmly refusing to be stampeded into forgetting the rules of common decency toward their fellow men.

City Attorney Whitworth was authorized by the council to appear in the Appellate Court to answer the writ which comes up for hearing next Monday. The attorney explained that he would not appear for the two members sought to be recalled by for the entire council who are made defendants in the suit. He declared he would give his best ability to the case.

The city clerk read the financial statement of the city funds, showing that the road fund contained $181,477, general fund, $69,932; total, $251,409.

An adjournment was taken to February 13.

GORGAS MEMORIAL INSTITUTE

ARE YOU CARRYING A SPARE

By Dr. Mark Lewis Emerson
Oakland, California

(This series of articles is prepared under the direction of the Gorgas Memorial Institute, which is organized to perpetuate the life work of the late Major-General Gorgas in preventing unnecessary illness. The headquarters of the Institute are at 1331 G Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.)

Every now and then we find some individual with one or two ribs to spare; in other words, he is carrying around with him a couple of spare ribs. Unfortunately, these extras do not protect him from future trouble, as do a couple of extra automobile tires. Quite the contrary; they too frequently get him into all kinds of real trouble and distress of a somewhat obscure origin.

By having one extra kidney, more than one lung, several lobes to his liver, a couple of hemispheres to his brain and two halves to his heart, many a person is kept alive indefinitely while one of these organs—or parts of it at least—are put out of commission, by disease or accident.

Spare ribs, or false ribs so-called, grow right above the first rib. The average rib is attached to the spinous process of the thoracic vertebrae, but these supernumerary ribs are the spinous processes themselves, growing out in rib shape at the top of the chest cavity.

There being no regular place for these ribs in the human economy, they seem to grow where they can, through and around the various nerves and structures in their vicinity, acting very much like a foreign body, instead of part of the economy of the human body.

These foreigners or unnecessary ribs will vary in length from one to several inches. If, in their peculiar and foreign growth, these spare ribs press on another bone or nerve or artery or vein at the base of the neck, they surely will make trouble with the possessor.

Certain definite groups of pain are generally associated with this extra cervical rib. Pains radiating thru the back of the neck, base of the skull, along the upper vertebrae of the back and neck, and especially radiating down the inner side of the arm. All these and many other pains are due to these extra ribs pressing on sensitive nerves or nerve filaments. Back pains, headaches, dull heavy feeling in upper part of spinal column, irritable temper and frequent change of glasses, is the common rule.

This condition cannot be determined except by a thorough physical examination, eliminating many other possible troubles. Much time is lost as a rule before this condition is finally diagnosed. The X-ray has much to tell you these days about obscure pains and their possible cause. A thorough physical examination is the all important thing here.

See your family doctor about your pains and aches, and don't be satisfied until the source of your trouble is found.
